

Descriptive writing

LAST WORD, FIRST WORD SENTENCE.

All around the swamp became alive; alive with the $\frac{1}{5}$ senses cries of a thousand tiny insects. I watched as $\frac{1}{5}$ senses they all fled the scene as if a bad smell had arose out of nowhere and they wanted to escape badly. I took a breath, trying to find whatever they were running from. Then it hit me. A strong, $\frac{1}{5}$ senses rotting smell filled my nose, making me want to gag. It was worse than I could have ever imagined. I understand now, why the insect's evacuation was necessary. ~~an~~ ambitious vocabulary

Slowly, I inched closer towards the swamp. The water was murky and grey with a thousand tiny frogs, hopping around inside. It had dead branches and twigs ~~floating~~ ^{bobbing} just above the surface and a canopy of trees that created a dark shadow, hiding $\frac{1}{5}$ senses whatever was floating in the distance. I squinted in attempt to get a good look at the mysterious object ~~far away~~. It (that was $\frac{1}{5}$ senses being covered) far away. If only I could see it. \rightarrow brackets for more information.
