

you.

Onesies should be named one wasteful payment. There's nothing quite like waking up on Christmas morning and having to crack a fake smile as you open your third onesie so far. Sure. They may not cost too much but there is nothing worse than receiving this utterly useless article of clothing.

Onesies have no redeeming qualities, this type of seasonal clothing is infamous for the high levels of discomfort someone feels whilst wearing it. What's the point in buying something that will itch you in winter and autumn and leave you sweaty and overheated in spring and summer? Not only are onesies just downright uncomfortable but also an embarrassment to wear. There is not a single feeling that leaves someone as embarrassed as when they open their door to collect a delivery only to feel itchiness all around your body and realise that you're wearing the ugliest piece of clothing ever to be yet another downside to onesies is the complete impracticality³ they have. In what situation would you ever want a onesie? I'll answer for you, never. Who in their right mind would want to wear something that they can't even go to the toilet ~~wear~~ with, without stripping down naked? Don't even get me started on the zipper, where boys have a high chance of saying bye to their future children! Clothes that can only be worn in the colder months are pretty much useless as warmth can be obtained by just simply wearing another layer.

★ Even if you did decide to buy a onesie, would you really be able to afford the extensive washing and care that they need? With the current ^{x3} electricity³ prices being through the roof washing everyday clothes is expensive as it is but add a onesie into the mix and the cost is doubled! That's not even getting into how difficult they are to dry, you're bound to be waiting for days just for your onesie to become wearable again.

Do you really want to spend your money on something that is expensive to wash? Something so uncomfortable? Or something^{so} impractical? If you answered yes to any of these you are wrong
